Something About The Pines

*We saw them protesting when the storms broke
As thunder crashed and sometimes lightning flared;
Then friendly darkness laid its thick protective cloak,
And dawn revealed each pine tree had been spared.*

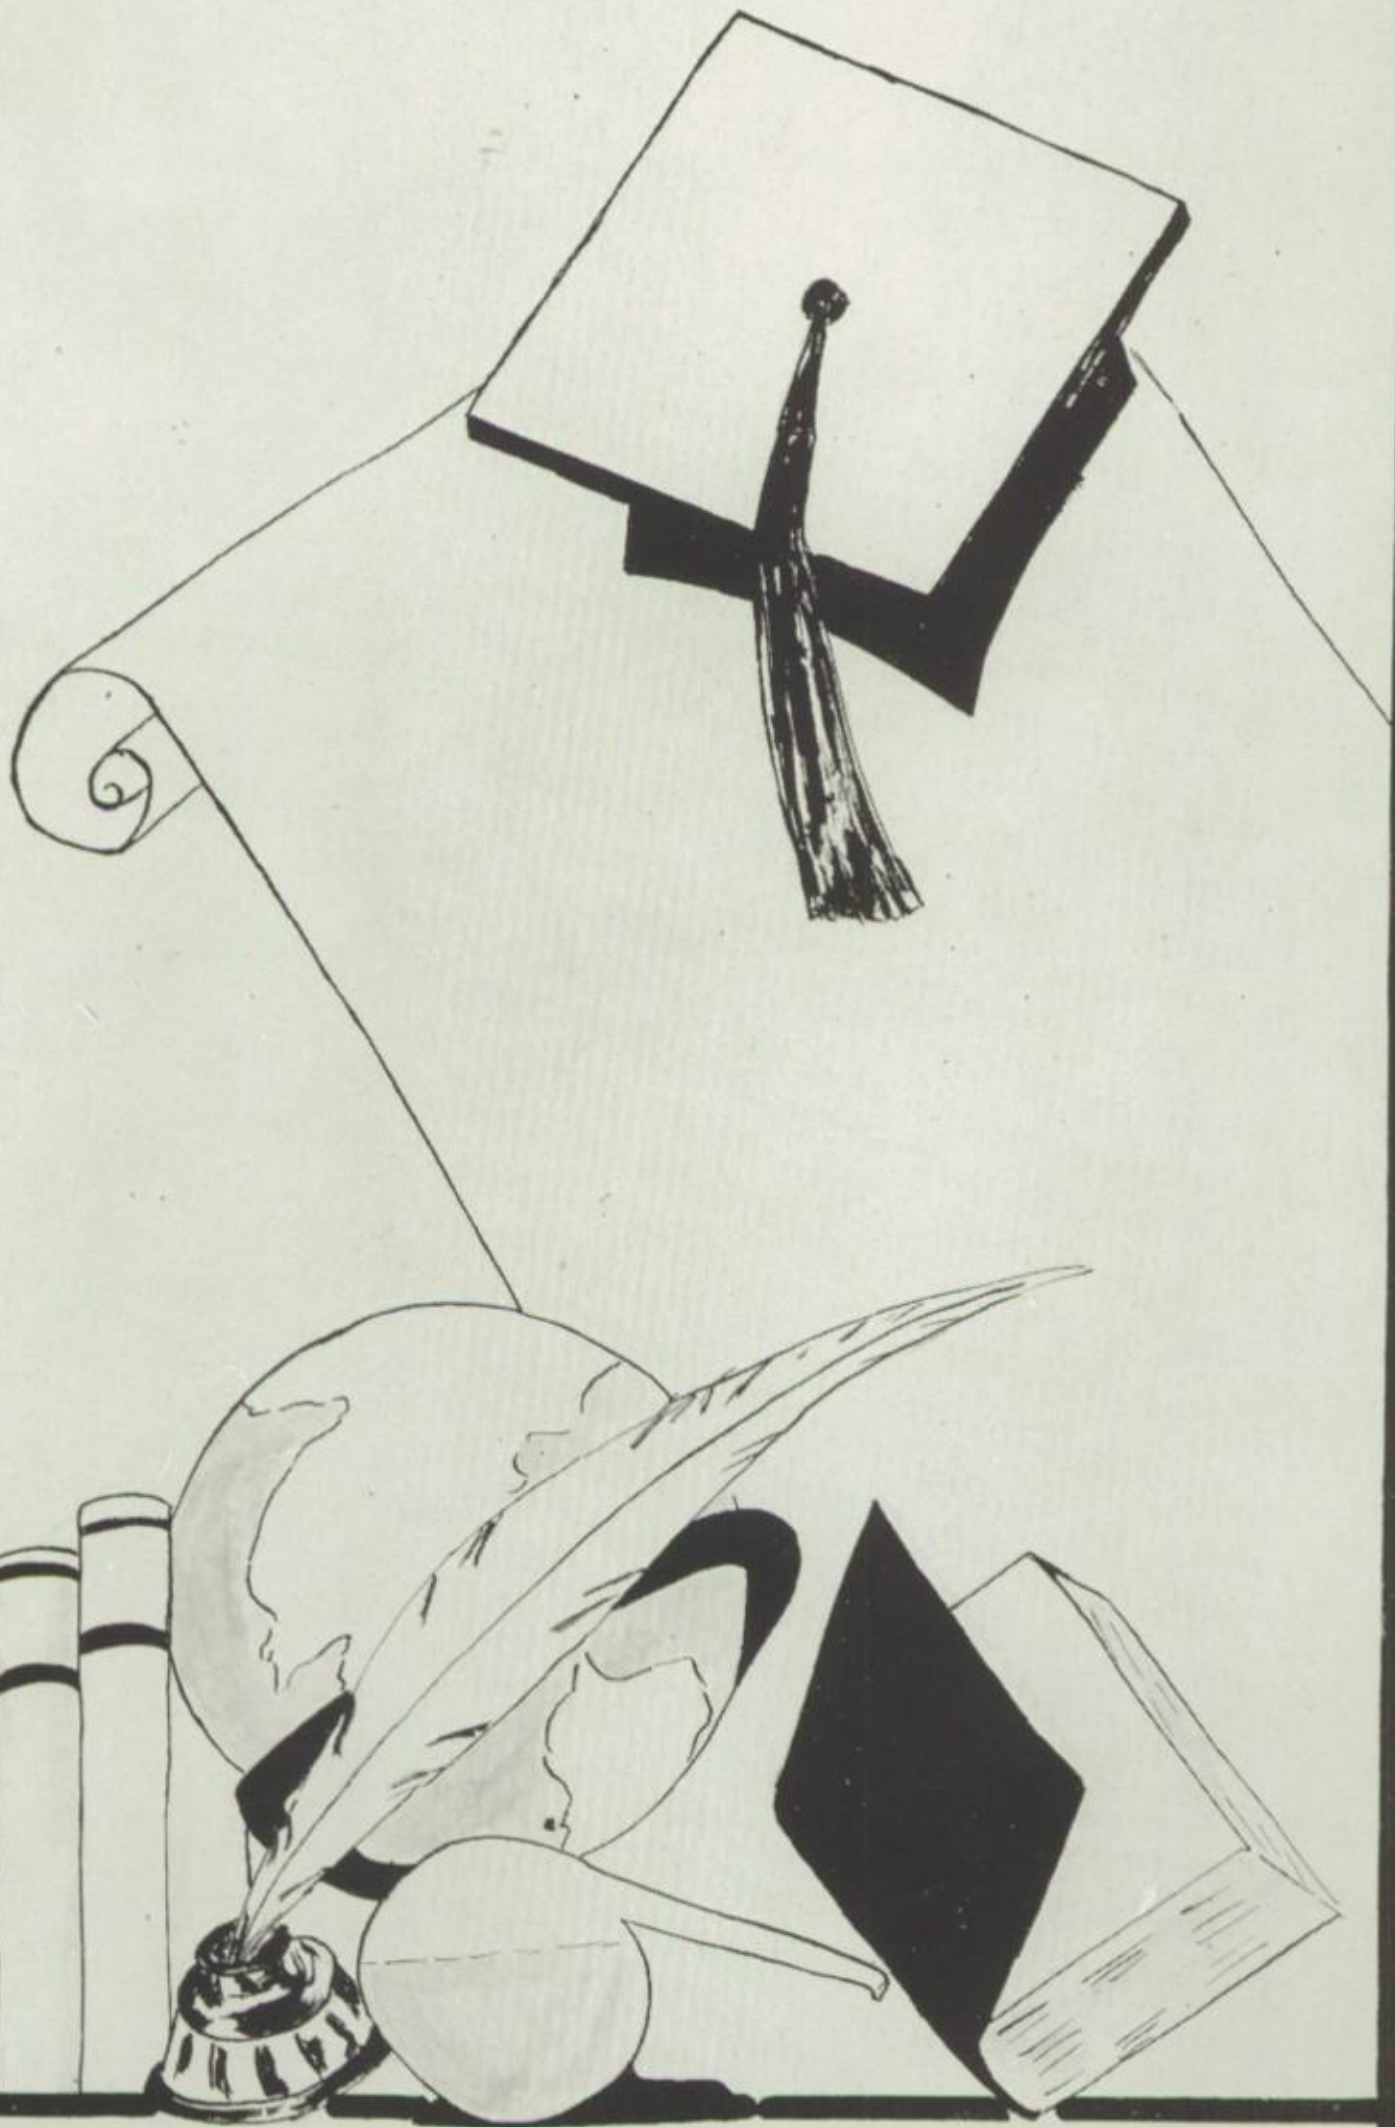

*We perceived when near attainment of our goal
Those pines were remnants of some other age,
That every pine tree was a Titan's soul,
Escaped from war such as giants would wage.*

*We heard their whispering when the wind blew
On its trackless course from somewhere far away,
And surely as the earth is round, we knew
Their thoughts were somehow from another day.*

RALPH SMITH.

"Gone Are The Days . . ."

PART I

It all started back in 1935 on one bright shining September morn when our proud mamas led us by the hand to our first day of SCHOOL. My, didn't we feel big!

Our grammar school days were days that we'll never forget. Things like the modeling clay and the blue, red, white, and green report cards in the first grade; the little store in the second grade and the entrance of Bill Titus; the new cylindrical fire escapes; the little clay beads we made; those terrible typhoid shots; the time a representative from each home room threw one shovelful of dirt on a newly planted tree in observance of Arbor Day; and the new girl, Eva Pearl Franklin, in the third grade; the huge geography books; the Valentine party Miss Smith gave us; the time the goat ate the cardboard mountains in the Heidi and Peter play; and the first Bible Class ever conducted in the Thomasville School System under the leadership of Miss Majorie Stith in the fourth grade; the fruit showers for the teachers; and the song Bobby Crawford made dear to our hearts, "Beer Barrel Polka", in the fifth grade; the records Miss Milner used to play—"The Swan" and "To A Wild Rose"; and the party we waited on for a whole year (and never had) in the sixth grade. I just love to reminisce about those days. Remember the first prom party we ever attended? I'll never forget—but I must stop and go on or we'll never get to Junior High.

PART II

Our first days in Junior High were little short of chaos. Instead of having one teacher all day long, we had a different teacher for every class. We were given little cards with the classes and room numbers on them, but even they didn't help too much. After the first six weeks we had settled down enough to consider ourselves high school students and the days rolled merrily on. (The teachers, however, say that we have never settled down and probably never will settle down. Yes, indeed, our lovely little band was the topic of many a faculty meeting.) One time when we were in the eighth grade, Ferrell Gray and John Scarborough wore dresses to school in defiance of the girls' wearing jeans. Mr. Reid called us all to chapel and said that the girls couldn't wear long pants to school any more. In the ninth grade Polly Mann was elected the first girl president. I'll never forget those campaign speeches. We were promised everything from juke boxes in the hall to a holiday every Wednesday. For our graduation, the girls wore their first high heels. It sounded as if a bunch of horses had been turned loose.

PART III

We entered Senior High awe stricken with tales of how "terrible" Miss Wertz was. We didn't say one word in her class unless she spoke to us and then we usually didn't know the answer to the question. She must have heard how the juniors and seniors had frightened us, for one day she had a little heart-to-heart talk with us, told us a joke on herself, and since then everything has been all right. It was in our junior year that the football boys were State Champions, and in the same year the Band and Glee Club took their first trip to Milledgeville for the State Music Festival. Our experiences there would fill a book. When we got home, we started right in on the plans for the Junior-Senior, that wonderful formal, that everyone had dreamed of ever since he was so high. At last the day came and we were at the top—we were SENIORS! Our Senior year was filled with things that will always remain crystal clear in our hearts, for it is an experience that no one can take from us. When I think of our Senior year, little things come to mind like the beautiful Christmas programs, the formal dances at Yuletide, the football games, arguments for student government, initiations, class rings, our second Junior-Senior, class night, and finally graduation with its tears and sadness.

Yes, it's been a long way, but now that it's all over and we look back, it seems as though it were not long enough. We have enjoyed every second of our twelve years, and to the new seniors we bid "adieu" and hope that their history will be filled with times equally as enjoyable as ours.

Last Will and Testament of the Class of 1947

Having arrived at the peak of the ladder by the normal path of twelve long, hard years, we are now forced to plunge into the outer world. However, before we part we wish to bequeath to the juniors, the following:

Laurice Walker wills his small ears and studious attitude to Brownie Cooper.

Myrtice Burgess receives, with pleasure, Mary Massey's love for the Commercial Room.

Theron Hardin, lucky boy, gets Frank Moore's clothes with the knowledge of a sure fit.

Herbert Lewitt is the fortunate heir to Ollie Dunlap's scarlet locks of hair.

Dot Minchew, in serious need, gets from Virginia McBride, her famous secret, "How I Got My Man."

Constance Dillard and Frances Kindred leave their love for Mr. Mac's afternoon chats to Sara Griffin and Molly Bruce.

William Raiford, who doesn't know a song by heart, gets Reece Turrentine's worn-weary copy of "Maleguna."

Lola Tillie and Annelle Turner bequeath their inherited "shake it but don't break it" swings to Annette McKinney and Janie Taylor.

Robert Cannady, Sara Dyke, and Edward Dunn leave the C. C., "the voice of the people(?)" to Donald Lewis and Norma Yandle.

From Fannie Lou Butler, Jean Forrester gets those coquettish looks and sweet remarks.

Billy "Fatty" Woodward leaves his charming dimples to Dan Irby and Bobby Tillie.

Howard Andrews and Robert Jinright will their speedy Plymouths to Ernest Green and Jim Rackley, with the hope that they can make Tallahassee in 15 minutes flat.

Norman Chastain and Gus Watt will their touchdowns and "sure-fire" plays to Louis Jerger and Cecil Redfern.

Warning—all beauty parlors—Rose Anstis receives Lillian Noles' last box of hair curlers.

Billie Trowell and Ann Linson relinquish their dancing lessons to Dora Christie and Mildred Reichert.

Anne Hasty leaves her various talents in music, art and dramatics to Carl Hutchison. Maybe he can do something with one of 'em.

"Hank" Patterson, who never opens his mouth, receives an autographed copy of "The Value of Increasing Your Vocabulary," by Ralph Smith.

Betty Sanders wills her art of handling college professors to Eleanor Inman, who may never get out of high school.

George Blow and Joe Young are sad to part with their love for the dance floor but are cheered in knowing that Edward Shirley and Hayward Hargrove are the proud recipients.

Adrian Rogers and Maurice Singletary get Ann Fleming and Mary Anne Thomas' collection of modern novels.

Leon Taylor is the privileged one to receive Vivian Harris's much-loved algebra book.

Emory Odom wills Mr. Mac's keys to Bill Pettigrew.

Watt Jeffries leaves his "A's" to David Dillinger and Sheftall Lanter.

Maryan "Wakulla" Segler leaves her personality to Ann Wahl.

Merita Davis leaves her immense height to be divided between Dorothy Watkins and Annie Lois Clark.

Jack Love leaves his Model "A" as a permanent taxi leaving for Terry's every day at 12:40 for Albert Johnson, with reserve seats for Janette Jones and Dorothy Kepling.

Elaine Blane, who can never get a car, receives Frances Innes's jeep.

"Handsome" Tommy McComb and Billy "The Face" Williams bequeath their good looks to Billy and Bobby Dunlap.

Kathryn Maxwell bequeaths her Spanish senorita appearance to Charlotte Hicks.

Harry Vann receives James Bell's love for assembly singing.

Margaret Courtney leaves her E period love letters to Pat Gainous.

Jack Collier and Dillard Griffin leave their dark handsome looks to Billy Evans and Kenneth Fulford.

Kathryn Blow leaves her dependability to Jane Blanton, who can certainly use it.

Ronald Lewis receives John Musselwhite's talents for geometry.

Janet Carlton is very fortunate to get Madelyn Davis' private mixture of peroxide and lemon juice.

Billy Carter wills his ability to "fox 'em" to none other than Farris Floyd.

Winfield Manry leaves his lovely wavy hair to Bobby Whiddon, whose hair never had a curl.

Marceille McEver leaves her cuteness to lucky Betty Stephens.

Thomas Crocker and Woodson Herring bequeath their shoes and their knowledge of walking home at night to Henry Knight, Franklin Harvin, and Jack Quick.

Tommy Ferguson and William Kindon get as a souvenir, the tattered menu of Erie Bullington's, entitled "Rehberg's Tea Room."

Arthur Burns leaves his fond remembrance of coach's paddle to Charles Allen.

Eva Franklin and Dorothy Gibson leave their silly laughs to Jean Brown and Carolyn Dixon, who might try smiling now and then.

Jack Thompson and Charles Williams leave their serious attitudes to "Buddy" Defreitas and Floyd Griffin.

Betty Terry leaves those famous legs to Barbara Teate with the famous formula handed down from Pat Chastain.

Osborne Chastain and "Buddy" Upchurch leave their recipe for the game warden to Nolan Collins and "Dude" McRory and hope they always "get the limit."

Barbara Gothard lets fly with her baton and hopes that "Lil" Sister Doris can handle it when the potential energy turns into kinetic.

Ferrell Gray leaves his girl friend "Louise" to Jimmy Thomas, who has so many now that he doesn't know what to do with them.

Sara Godwin and Alice Creech leave their typewriters to Marjorie Prince and Margaret Tanner.

Dorothy Bryant and Patsy Gilmer leave their trouble with lockers to Dorothy Rickey and Doris and Mary Elva Turner.

Eloise Stevens leaves her quiet attitude toward everything to Betty Jo Fricks, who surely doesn't have any use for it.

Audrey Singletary leaves his vast repertoire of jokes to Clayton Courson, who should go in for popping corn.

Betty Bloodworth leaves her favorite hypodermic needle to Annette Jones. Groan!!

Edna Dowling and Carolyn Ziegler will their affection for each other to Sue Rigsby and Shirley Stokes.

Joe May, Jack Watkins and Branson Grovenstein leave their knowledge of the Kansas City Conservatory and their last pair of ear-stoppers to Ralph McChesney, Bryan Robinson, and Bill Kelly.

Charles Callahan is lucky to receive James Pippin's ability to hit it off with Miss Wertz.

Esther Adler and Diana Roberts leave their friendliness to Cherie Ann Carter and Ida Ann Taylor.

Sara Ann Joiner and Jo Ann Jackson bequeath their recipes to Dorothy Kepling, Annette Jones, and Mildred Tryan.

Joyce Hart and Jean Holland will their championship basketball squad to Jean Forrester and June Woodward.

Remer Cone and A. J. Prince leave their love for Bill Colvin and the "Musical Clock" to Bob Allen and James Dekle.

Connie Chastain leaves her ability always to get elected Home-room treasurer to Lois Dowling and Mary Bass.

And I, Bobby Crawford, leave to all you Juniors your final year, with the hope that it will mean to you what it did to those of '47.

Checked and closed this 6th day of June, 1947.

Good luck - - Au Revoir,
